Day of July 12 as the Day of the Apostles Peter and Paul ("Petrov Day")

Петров
День

Petrov Day in Russian folklore was called the "top" of summer. On this day, the Petrov Fasting ended and the hay season began.

Haymaking usually lasted two to three weeks and was considered difficult but festive in the Russian countryside: both women and men wore holiday clothes for haymaking, after work round dances, games and dances were arranged.

Since ancient times on this day, parents presented their adult son with a new braid in which he went out into the world as a full-grown adult worker.
